Orientation on New Mental Turn in Philosophy
(October 6 – 10, 2015)

A five day Orientation Programme is planned to introduce some basic themes of the recent history of Philosophy of Mind and provide an overview of the externalism Internalism debates. The debates are related to concerns about minds relation to the world and have a Cartesian legacy. In many recent debates metaphysical, epistemological and psychological issues have mingled which create questions about the very nature of philosophical enterprise as on a priori discipline.

Writings of Hilary Putnam and Saul Kripke on meaning and reference were important in our understanding of how mental states are individuated. David Chalmers has been a major contributor to the debates who clarifies many problems regarding wide and narrow content. Tyler Burge, John Mc Dowell, Gareth Evans, Dan Jahavi, Davidson and Dummet's works along with those of some Indian scholars will be briefly introduced where old orthodoxies are questioned and new orthodoxies are battled.
