CONCEPT NOTE

The Upanishads constitute the end part of the four Vedas namely the Rigveda, Yajurveda, Samaveda, and Atharvaveda. Hence, they are also known as Vedanta, meaning the end of the Vedas (Veda + Anta).

They represent the highest thought of the Vedic religion, and so also Hinduism. The Upanishads have been perennial sources of spiritual knowledge. The word Upanishads means secret and sacred knowledge.

The ancient Indian intellectual tradition with its varied academic domains like culture and civilization, spirituality and ethics, social political and economic thought, mathematics and natural sciences, art and literature and educational system etc. were guided by the indigenous Indian thought, which is more appropriately called 'Darshana'.

The present work shop shall explore the basic Indian philosophical concept and theories. We need to revisit our own intellectual discourses and build on its strengths.

This workshop shall have deliberations, discussions and presentations on the theme "Readings on Upanishad".

The objective is to acquaint teachers with the rich and varied heritage of Indian Philosophy as well as revitalize Indian philosophical Heritage.

Indian Council of Philosophical research (ICPR) in collaboration with department of philosophy Moolji Jaitha College, Jalgaon is organizing 5 days workshop on the theme, "Upanishadic Wisdom for 21st Century". The workshop is targeted at Philosophy teachers and PhD Scholars at National level. The Purpose of this workshop is to revive our ancient traditional values contained in the rich Hindu Vedic literature of Indian philosophy.

The major sub themes are:

- 1) Brihadaranyaka Upanishad
